any family live on 80 square feet plinth area? How can one spread his legs on 10 feet by 8 feet ? If Government is sincere in its efforts to help slum-dwellers, can they not do what had been done in England ? They gave to each lowera nd middle-class house-owner on outright grant of—not loan £ 100. Why can't we do something like that ? They should fix these slum people in more plinth area and also give subsidy for such construction so that the slum-dwellers may be able to construct houses.

Prohibition is another thing. Everybody knows I am opposed to it. I do not want to talk more on that subject. There are various other things on which I want to talk.

Mr. SPEAKER : The hon. Member may have ample opportunities to talk when the Demands come.

Thiru K. M. SUBRAMANIAM : One more point. The Hon. Minister for Industries has been saying that there have been plenty of industries coming up. I would like him to go to Guindy Industrial Estate. Let him see how many industries are closing one after another. Government's intention may be good but actual execution is not up to the mark. Loans to ryots for agricultural operations are not given quickly. They want two sureties for one application. No loan is given to the two sureties. Thus, only one in three gets the loan. That is the assistance of nationalised banks for agricultural development.

There are many things on which I want to talk. I am glad Government had put a ceiling on bus transport routes. It is the only progressive sign. I am very much concerned about nationalisation. I want nationalisation of everything; it must be efficient and socially purposeful. They had said all bus-undertakings owning more than 50 routes, would be nationalised. If they are going to set up a corporation, I hope and trust they will not usher in affected bus-owners therein, so that they can indirectly carry on their old business. What we want by Nationalisation is not mere taking over by Government but a social purpose has to be served. Nationalisation should work honestly, efficiently and sufficiently. The social purpose has to be served. That is the main point. Thank you Sir.

Mr. SPEAKER : The hon. Member can talk further when the Transport Demand comes.
